There are few artists these days who have not heard of Michael Chesley Johnson. In addition to teaching workshops throughout North America, he has authored several books and videos, frequently writes for Pastel Journal and other magazines and is a contributing editor for The Artist's Magazine.

Join Michael in the hallowed landscapes of the historic White Mountain/Hudson River School painters such as Albert Bierstadt, Thomas Cole, Benjamin Champney and others. Michael works in both oils and pastels and welcomes students working in either medium. Although some prior plein air experience is strongly recommended, this workshop is open to all levels of plein air painters. We will work outdoors on location as much as possible, and if the weather dares to be uncooperative we will work indoors and/or on the porch at The Bartlett Inn.

The Bartlett Inn serves a hearty hot breakfast each morning, and there are many dining options in the area for other meals. You will make your reservation for both lodging and the workshop through the Bartlett Inn and reservations are on a first come, first served basis. Please make your reservations by phone, as lodging is at a special discounted price for the artists in the workshop, and the coordinator will need to know if you will be using oils or pastels so that the appropriate supply list and information packet can be sent to you. Also be sure to let the innkeepers know if you have any special medical dietary requirements. After you have made your reservation, you will receive an information packet with supply list and pertinent information about the area including shopping and restaurants will be mailed to you. Act fast – in past years Michael's workshop in southern NH filled to waiting list within just a few days of being announced, even though the announcement was several months in advance of the dates

To make your reservation, call The Bartlett Inn at 603.374.2353
